Tower of Light

The Tower of Light by well-known West Coast artist Ed Carpenter is an illuminated 60' high stainless steel and laminated imported opal glass memorial at the heart of downtown Orlando, Florida.

Placed in front of City Hall and at the centerline of Orange Avenue, the tower celebrates physically and metaphorically the intersection of private and public interests in Orlando, and is a symbol for the aspirations of the community. Visitors can see the tower from several blocks away as they drive down Orange Avenue towards City Hall. Currently the lights are inoperable and a private initiative to save and restore the light to the Tower of Light is underway and seeking donations. It is viewable continually.

The large circular Light Medallions, which surround the top of the large rotunda just inside City Hall, were also designed by Ed Carpenter. They connect the artwork outside to the inside and allow light to be reflected through the specially cut glass.

These pieces were commissioned by the City of Orlando percent for art program when the new City Hall was built in 1992.

In the third floor Mayor's Gallery you can find these two vessels by Tampa artist Duncan McClellan who also is represented in the airport selections.
