Public Art & Commercial Buildings

An architectural decorative border over the transom entrance to the Garden Theatre. The design was created to reflect the transom glass that was in the original theatre's 1935 entrance, but long since destroyed. The current owners did not actually have a photo of the original glass, but had a first-hand verbal description. The building committee chose a design that represented the style, coloring and feel of the newly renovated (2008) theatre. One challenge was to create a transitional piece moving from an art-deco exterior to Mediterranean-revival interior. Local resident & artist, Mary Keating, wife of the General Contractor, Tim Keating, President of R. C. Stevens Construction Company, took the committee's design, then choose the final colors and glass nuances to complement the vision. Mary fabricated the glass in her renovated 'barn' studio in the backyard of her home in Oakland. Mary works with glass, metal welding, pottery and a variety of mediums creating large pieces of yard art and garden art.
