National Youth HIV/AIDS Awareness Day

Each year, National Youth HIV/AIDS Awareness Day (NYHAAD) is recognized on April 10 to educate and raise awareness on the impact HIV has on the youth, people between age 13 and 24. According to the CDC, 1 in 5 new HIV diagnoses in 2015 were among youth with a majority of those new cases among Black MSM.

New HIV Diagnoses Among Youth Aged 13-24 in the United States, by Race/Ethnicity and Sex, 2015

*Subpopulations representing 2% or less of the overall US epidemic are not represented in this chart.

To honor this day, a group of individuals from The Center, Miracle of Love, Area 7, Hope and Help, and UCF Wellness and Prevention Services got together at Ember for Sunday Funday. Sunday Funday attracts a lot of younger people from the LGBT community, and was a great opportunity to raise awareness, have fun, and meet the community where they are at. The event was very well received and many people came to the table to take pictures with props, participate in condom demonstrations, and get condoms and prizes. The group determined that this would be a great way to outreach at quarterly events and continue to raise awareness!
BRIAN SMITH’S RED RIBBON BIO

Dr. Brian A. Smith (retired) was appointed to the Planning Council for the Orlando EMA in January 2016 after 30 years involvement in the HIV+ community in Los Angeles. He received his doctorate (chiropractic) in 1987, finished post-graduate studies to become a certified internist in 1996 and qualified as a naturopathic physician in 1999. His formal introduction to the HIV+ community began in 1984 with participation in a small support group run by the Reverend Louise Hay, which blossomed into the Hayride, a weekly support group with more than 700 people in attendance by 1987. Reverend Hay founded Hay House Publishing, which still publishes many inspiring works by and for PLWHA. He attended the first professional presentation by Robert Gallo, M.D., at UCLA. In 1988 he became the owner and director of “The Health Affair” on Sunset Boulevard at the border between Beverly Hills and West Hollywood, one of the first private practices to focus on HIV management. It was founded by Donald Dickenson, Ph.D. (Nutrition), and Garyx Zimmerman, D.C., in 1978. Dr. Dickenson authored the first book detailing the impact of nutrition on the immune system with a focus on HIV. Published in 1984, How to Fortify Your Immune System provided some hope at a time when there were no treatments available — some readers may recall the days of AL-721, SPV-30, dextran sulfate, concentrated aloe vera extract and hydrogen peroxide-based therapies, and the p24 antigen/antibody tests and B2M levels, before testing for the virus was invented. Dr. Smith continued the practice until 2012 at which time several of the patients that predated his involvement with the practice were living very full lives. His successor continues with these same patients who were told in the earliest days their life-span could be numbered in months.

From this start Dr. Smith’s involvement grew to include being a speaker, educator, researcher, writer and dedicated volunteer at many organizations including Being Alive, AIDS Project Los Angeles (APLA, founder Nutrition Task Force, 1990), Northern Lights Alternatives, the Los Angeles Center for Living (1989), Pets Are Wonderful Support (PAWS-LA), the Computer AIDS Information Network (CAIN) and the Nutritional Products Buyer’s Club (director, 1990). In 1990, he was appointed a Medical and Scientific Advisory Board Member of Search Alliance, the forerunner of AIDS ReSearch Alliance, one of the oldest research organizations dedicated to HIV and AIDS research in the country. He became a faculty member in the HIV Nurse Clinician program (Pacific AIDS Education & Training Center, funded by Ryan White Part E) at the University of Southern California in 1990 which lasted until 2000; he developed and taught a post-graduate program for HIV care for OMDs (Oriental Medical Doctors, 1993) as well as teaching on the same subject for several continuing education programs for medical doctors including programs at Scripps Mercy Hospital (both in San Diego) and USC. He authored the first professional article outlining a projected research project to be published in peer-reviewed chiropractic research literature (The Internist, 1997) and, in the mid-1990s, was the Los Angeles-based clinical investigator on two nationwide studies on HIV. One was funded by the NIH, which investigated the use of complementary and alternative therapies, and the second studied the effects of growth-hormone preparations on HIV-infected persons with wasting syndrome. He was a commentator for Pacifica Radio-KPFK, covering the 6th International AIDS Conference in June 1990, and in 1991 and 1992 produced and directed the cable television show “Your Health, Naturally.”

Since being appointed to the Planning Council, Dr. Smith has become the vice-chair of the membership committee and has represented the Council at several events including the “National HIV/AIDS Awareness Day” in September, the “I Am a Queen Bee” and the Orange County Employees Health Fair in February of this year. He also has represented the Council before several student organizations on the campuses of University of Central Florida and Valencia College, East.

Condom Safety

By DR. BRIAN A. SMITH (RET)

Dr. Brian A. Smith (retired) was The seizure of more than 40,000 “knock-off” condoms in Puerto Rico this past March, many destined for Central Florida, has raised safety concerns. Companies in China have been mislabeling substandard condoms under several well-known brand names as well as “no-name” condoms and selling them at greatly discounted prices around the world. These condoms routinely fall below the government standards set for acceptable “fail rates” which is a measure of how likely it is that any particular condom will burst while in use. More than 4 million condoms were seized before being exported from China but many more made it out of that country before the raids by government agencies. While the effects on Central Florida are not known at this time, what could have been a huge public health disaster has appeared to have been mostly averted.

Companies in China have been mislabeling substandard condoms under several well-known brand names as well as “no-name” condoms and selling them at greatly discounted prices around the world. These condoms routinely fall below the government standards set for acceptable “fail rates” which is a measure of how likely it is that any particular condom will burst while in use. More than 4 million condoms were seized before being exported from China but many more made it out of that country before the raids by government agencies. While the effects on Central Florida are not known at this time, what could have been a huge public health disaster has appeared to have been mostly averted.

Still, consumers should be prudent in their selection process. When making a purchase, take a good look at the package — if anything seems “off” or if they are being sold at a “really great price” — you may want to exercise a bit of caution. Which brings me to the next topic — types of condoms. There are two broad categories of condoms — prophylactic condoms and novelty condoms. Prophylactic condoms are designed to prevent pregnancy and reduce transmission of STDs and HIV. Novelty condoms are not.

The most common type of novelty condoms are flavored condoms — but not all flavored condoms are novelty condoms, some are also prophylactic. Novelty condoms are condoms that are not designed to be used for sex. They include joke condoms used for gag gifts (no pun intended) such as the “foot-long” condom. Sometimes people don’t realize that novelty condoms are just that — novelties. This lack of realization has the potential to make something that started out as a joke become dangerous. Most novelty condoms are labeled “Not for use for sex” but recent events have shown us that the mislabeling of condoms is far more widespread than previously thought.

Cost is not a good gauge as novelty condoms may be more or less expensive than regular condoms. The price depends on what the novelty condoms are made of and how they are being marketed. In general, flavored condoms don’t cost more than other condoms however price is not a gauge for how safe it is. No novelty condom should be considered safe unless it explicitly states that the condom is safe for vaginal and anal intercourse on the package. Novelty condoms should not be used as protection during oral sex.

Flavored condoms are available at many drugstores and sex shops, with many more options available online. Some businesses place novelty condoms in a different area of the store than where they shelve the condoms that can actually be used for safe sex; some businesses do not. You want to make certain the condoms are actually approved for use during sex. Novelty condoms are not always clearly marked but a little common sense will help determine if they are being sold strictly as a novelty item. What products are next to them? Lollipops and ice-cube trays shaped like sex organs? They’re probably novelty condoms.

Oral sex is the raison-d’être of flavored condoms. Before using a flavored condom for anything other than oral sex, read the packaging they came in. If the box says not to use the condoms for vaginal sex, you should avoid using them for anal sex as well.

Want safety to taste good too? Consider sticking to well known condom brands’ flavored varieties, and check the box; there should be a statement about their suitability for the prevention of disease transmission and pregnancy during any sex act. Remember – once a flavored condom is put on, the only other place it is meant to go is a place that has taste buds. The chemicals used to add flavor may act as an irritant in the vaginal and anal canal. Irritated mucous membranes are much less likely to repel microorganisms of all kinds. This is an important part of sexual health, and you should never give a novelty condom to someone without telling them that it is a novelty – just because you know the difference does not mean your friend does.

Have a healthy and fulfilling sex life without placing yourself and others in danger.

HOPWA

Housing Opportunities for Persons With AIDS

The Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS (HOPWA) program was established by the AIDS Housing Opportunity Act in 1992 to address the critical housing needs of low-income Americans living with HIV infection and their families. HOPWA is managed by the Federal Government’s Housing and Urban Development’s (HUD) Office of HIV/AIDS Housing. In order for an area, called an Eligible Metropolitan Area (EMA), to be eligible to receive funding from HUD, there must be more than 500,000 people and at least 1,500 cumulative AIDS cases. Orlando is considered an EMA and it includes the counties of Orange, Osceola, Seminole, and Lake.

HOPWA funds a number of different services that can assist an eligible individual/family with their housing needs. For example, if an eligible household gets behind in paying the rent and/or utilities, call HOPWA! If an individual is homeless, including sleeping on a friend’s couch for a few months, call HOPWA! If a household who has never received HOPWA deposit assistance before has the chance to move in to a new apartment and needs rental and utility deposit assistance, call HOPWA!

In order to be eligible for HOPWA assistance, a person must present documentation providing proof of their diagnoses of HIV/AIDS and their household income cannot exceed a HUD-established amount (80 percent of the area median income). Once an individual or family is deemed eligible for HOPWA services, a housing case manager will assess the specific needs of the household and determine the housing services that are appropriate at that time.

An essential part of HOPWA is the housing case management service. Both individuals and families who are challenged with low income and high rent will greatly benefit from working with someone who can help identify the barriers to paying bills on time and help find solutions to the financial crisis. The result is that the household will learn to live within their income means and know that help is only a phone call away if a housing crisis occurs again.

Specific HOPWA service categories are:

- Case Management Services provided by a HOPWA housing specialist are required for all households who receive housing assistance. Services may include financial assistance through one or more of the HOPWA service categories, budgeting, understanding a lease, tenant rights and responsibilities, and referrals to other services.
- Short-Term Housing Assistance provides temporary shelter for individuals/families that are homeless and need immediate housing assistance. This is a time-limited program where assistance cannot exceed 60 days in any 6 month period.
- Short-Term Rent, Mortgage and Utility (STRMU) Assistance is available when the household is currently housed, with a current lease or mortgage, and is at risk of homelessness. Utility assistance is also available as long as the eligible person can show proof of responsibility toward paying the utility bill. This is a time-limited program where assistance cannot exceed 21 weeks in a 52 week period.
- Facility-Based Housing Assistance may provide either short-term or long-term assistance, depending upon the circumstances of the individual/family. Those who qualify for Facility-Based Housing are homeless and may require a longer period of time to stabilize their health and establish housing options before moving back in to independent living. Clients may have to pay a co-pay of 30% of their adjusted income in this housing program.
- Tenant-Based Rental Assistance (TBRA) may be time-limited or long-term assistance depending upon the circumstances of the household. In this program, there are a few more HUD regulations that must be in place: 1) the household may have to pay a co-pay of 30% of their adjusted income, 2) the rent cannot exceed the fair market rent, 3) an appropriate size apartment is determined based on the family size, 4) a monthly utility allowance is paid by HOPWA but any amount over the allowance must be paid by the household, and 5) monthly home visits and inspections are required by a housing case manager.
- Permanent Housing Placement Assistance is comprised of the deposit amount of a rental unit and the first month’s rent. The goal of this assistance is to help an individual/family establish permanent and stable housing.

Both HOPWA and Ryan White Part A now access consumer information from one source. This means that a person’s eligibility for either program can be established by a HOPWA or Ryan White Case Manager. The Consumer can then confidently share with either Case Manager what their needs are, and together, a broader and more effective plan of care can be created.
